August Meeting Details: Jana McGuire, the Center for Food Integrity. The topic of discussion is The Transparency Revolution: What Consumers Expect from Food and Ag to Earn Their Trust. Jana will discuss transparency when it comes to the questions: what's in our food? Who is producing it? How is it being produced? And, how does this impact our health? It's a new day where transparency is no longer optional – It's a basic consumer expectation. Jana McGuire will highlight the research, show how some in the industry are stepping up and what you can do to be more transparent. CFI is based in Kansas City and is a not-for-profit organization with a diverse membership whose mission is the help today's food system earn trust. Jana joined CFI in 2008 and has a bachelor's and master's degrees from UNL College of Journalism and Mass Communications. She brings a wide range of experience with a long career encompassing communications training, broadcast news, media and public relations, and video production.

Looking Back: June 7, 2016 – Tour of the Nebraska Innovation Center in Lincoln – A few of our members took a bus down to Lincoln to get a good look into the Nebraska Innovation Center and what all they are doing for companies, students, and individuals in the state of Nebraska by providing work space and technology to utilize for research and development of all kinds. This presentation included a look into their state of the art food production and testing facilities, engineering/innovative research facilities that included instruments and machines like 3D printers and wood working tools, and classrooms/auditoriums that are available for use by anyone in the United States to utilize. The tour ended with a short presentation on the Food Safety Modernization Act and then lunch in the Haymarket. Thank you to all who attended.
